SUMMER SCHOOL ENDS

With The Largest Enrollment in The History of The U. of D.

305 WERE IN ATTENDANCE

This week marks the close of the six weeks Summer School being held at the University of Delaware. With an enrollment of 305 students, the present session holds the record of being the largest Summer School in the history of the State. The influx of students at the opening of the session was so great that the original plan of holding the classes and serving the meals in the buildings of the Women's College had to be abandoned and the more commodious quarters of the Men's College utilized. The teaching staff, too, was found to be inadequate to handle the large numbers and Miss Elizabeth Jenkins, one of the Rural Supervisors of Kent county was added to the faculty.

In summarizing the more outstanding features of the present session Professor W. A. Wilkinson, Director of Summer School, mentioned, in addition to the unusually large attendance, the professional spirit and enthusiasm prevalent among the students. Despite the extremely hot weather that has prevailed during most of the session, most of the students have worked with a zeal that has been particularly gratifying. Both the large attendance and the earnestness of purpose on the part of students Director Wilkinson attributes, in part, to the influence of the corps of rural Supervisors who, in their work over the State, have inspired teachers with a desire for better preparation, and in part, also, to the higher salaries now being offered to well trained teachers. Practically one-third of those who attended the Summer School last year are in attendance again this year, voluntarily striving for the higher grades of certificate that will entitle them to the increased salaries.

MILITARY TRAINING CAMPS

During July and August, 1921, at twelve Regular Army posts in all sections of the country 10,000 young Americans, between 16 and 35 years of age, will be offered free military training for thirty days.

The Government pays all the expenses of this training. The candidate gives only his time. In return he will learn:

1st. How to serve his country in peace and war.

2d. How to care for his body, build up his health, and live a happy, vigorous life.

3d. Habits of self-control, resourcefulness and self-reliance.

4th. Discipline, precision and a sense of order.

5th. Co-operation and team work.

The great need of such training and the service these camps render, there should be no necessity of explaining to the people of this community. As the letter noted below indicates, it is now too late for anyone else to sign up for this year, but it is not too late to do so for next year.

HEADQUARTERS 2D CORPS AREA,
GOVERNORS ISLAND, N. Y.,
July 18, 1921.

From: The Commanding General.
To: All Reserve Officers.
Subject: Citizens' Military Training Camps.

1. The Commanding General desires me to express his sincere thanks for the help of reserve officers in obtaining applicants for the Plattsburg Camp this year.

2. He regrets that all who applied could not be accepted. There have been 3800 applications to this date and the money appropriated covers the expenses of only 800. The unaccepted applicants are being held on a preferred list for next year. As they number about 3000 you can see that it would be advisable for any men wishing to go next year to apply at this time.

3. Further it is called to your attention that these applications are documentary evidence of the interest of civilians in this corps area in training camps. As you know, the National Defense Act of June 4, 1920, assures to citizens the right to have military training and we now know that the citizens want this training.

For the Commanding General:
HARVEY H. FLETCHER,
Assistant Adjutant
R. R. S.

The receipts of the firemen's carnival of Elkton last week were $10,000. Miss Emma Maxwell, of Wilmington, was awarded the automobile.

The amount appropriated for defraying expenses of the Summer School of the University of Delaware is not sufficient this year to pay the entire expenses of all students. The amount appropriated is $15,000.

The S. S. Deutschfeld, of the United American Line, the first German steamship to enter Philadelphia since the war, sailed up the river on Thursday and docked at Pier 48, South, seventeen days after leaving Hamburg with a general cargo.

Professor George E. Dutton, in charge of enrollment of new students at the University of Delaware, reports sixty accepted students already this year, which indicates that this year's class, despite financial conditions will equal, if not surpass, that of last year.

Newark was visited by a terrific electrical storm last Sunday afternoon, which brought along in its wake, one of the most severe hail storms ever seen in that section of the country. Had it not been for the warmth which was prevalent before the storm, crops throughout the section would very likely have been ruined. As it were, the huge balls of ice soon melted and caused no serious damage to the crops.

TOMATO CANNERS MAKE OFFER

Blackbird canners who have decided to operate their tomato packing plants, and have sold their future pack, are seeking to secure supplies. Some of them are offering fifty cents a basket but growers believe the price will rise to ninety-five cents. The blossoms are late which means that the crop will not be ready to pick at the usual time. They are refusing to sell by contract and will go into the open market.

Growers who were successful in getting their tomato plants set are looking forward to higher prices than ever before known in this section. In the early spring, when it was thought that few canning houses would pack tomatoes this year farmers thought they had better contract for $10 a ton and grow smaller acreage. The long dry period during June, however, caused most of the young plants to die. Farmers who found new plants hard to get decided to set out other crops, thus the acreage was reduced. It is now about one-tenth of the usual acreage.

While the tomato plants survived have made a large growth in spite of the dry season very few green tomatoes and blossoms are found. That is why canners who sold packs in advance are anxious to secure supplies.

Some farmers have turned their attention to growing the little yellow preserving tomatoes which seem to have stood the drought better than the larger red tomatoes. It is expected that the yellow tomatoes will be bought for preserving purposes to take the place of fruit that is scarce.

Hobart Bosworth in "His Own Law," will be the attraction at the Opera House next Thursday evening.

Misses Wife With 3 Shots

Avery Baker, 32 years old, of Townsend, was committed to the New Castle County Workhouse Saturday night, in default of $1200 bail under which he had been held by Magistrate Hodgson, after an unsuccessful attempt to shoot his wife, at her home in Townsend. Baker is said to have fired three bullets at the woman from a revolver but none of them struck her.

The man is said to have been drunk. The couple had been separated for a year and a half. Baker was arrested by Constable Timmons and held by Magistrate Hodgson for Court of General Sessions.

BASE BALL

The Middletown A. A. base ball team has redeemed itself during the past few weeks by winning three successive games, and the local fans are highly elated over the manner in which their favorites are walloping the horse-hide. On Saturday last, the Elkton team composed of several fast ball players proved to be easy picking for the home team, when they met defeat on the local diamond by the score 11 to 1. In fact the Marylanders would have been shut out, if the local twirler had not walked a man when all of the bases were filled, and forced their only run across the home plate.

Hamilton, has been secured to finish the season for Middletown, and made his debut in Saturday's game, and defeated the visiting team without a single hit. His superb pitching caused twelve of the visitors to fan the air, and not one of them succeeded in getting a ball to the outfield, and his support was perfect.

The score by innings:

Middletown.....0 3 0 2 2 0 3 1 x—11

GRACE M. E. CHURCH TO-DAY

The local management promises a real game this afternoon, at Academy Park, when the home team will meet for the first time this season the Grace M. E. Church team, of Wilmington. The church boys have a fast aggregation of ball players, and the local team will have to play gilt-edge ball to win. Hamilton and Segelken will be the battery for Middletown.

TOWNSEND 11; DELAWARE CITY 5

A large crowd of spectators witnessed a fine game of ball at Townsend, last Saturday afternoon, when the local club of that place defeated the Delaware City Travelers by the score of 11 to 5. Money did the twirling for Townsend and after the first inning had the visitors guessing, while the visiting pitcher was hit hard in the 5 and 6 innings, during which time Townsend rolled up 10 runs.

The score by innings:

Delaware City.....4 0 0 0 0 0 1 0 0— 5
Townsend.....0 0 0 0 7 3 1 0 x—11

M. P. CLUB TO-DAY

Aug. 21st. Thirteenth Sunday after Trinity.

Aug. 24th. St. Bartholomew, Apostle.

St. Anne's Church extends a hearty welcome to all, and especially those who have no church affiliation.

The Sunday evening services during the month of August will be three-quarters of an hour duration. Let us have as large an attendance as possible.

Some people act as if they thought they had no need of God in summer, or as if He had excused them from every religious duty. But this cannot be so. The Christian of steadfast loyalty will not let his religious duties lapse at any time of the year. Summer is a time when the service should appeal to the most of us when all God's work is manifest and beautiful in flower and leaf. The Rector during his vacation preached to congregations which filled the church.

"As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." It is a practical doctrine, and it is a very beneficial practice to think of "whatsoever things are lovely" in the lives of others. It is as sensible as it is to thrive on the finest wheat instead of starving the body by chewing worthless husks. A man's soul becomes small if it is fed on mean thoughts that cannot satisfy its natural longings for wholesome meditations and ennobling hopes. It cannot be otherwise. If a flower doesn't get sunshine it soon fades. So it is with the life of an individual. Life must be radiated by the cheerful sunshine of love for God and neighbors in order to become beautiful; and more noble still is the life that is enriched by Christ-like love for enemies as well. The results are as logical as they are evident. St. Paul gave sound advice when he said, "if they be any virtue, if they be any praise, think on these things." Good thoughts are a wise investment, because, "as a man thinketh, so is he."

The Rector of St. Anne's was elected Secretary of the Peninsula Summer School, which met at Ocean City, Md., the last week of June, for the fourth successive year.

CARS MUST BE TITLED

Secretary of State Benson is calling the attention of motor vehicle owners to the recently enacted addition to state motor laws, compelling owners of automobiles registered in Delaware to obtain official certificates of title, which became effective on June 1.

Within ninety days of the time the law became operative, applications must be made for such identification certificates for all automobiles already registered in this state during 1921, and applications for certificates must accompany all future registration applications.

Severe penalties provided for violations include: Operation in this state of motor vehicle registered in Delaware, without certificate of title having been issued, fine of from $5 to $1000; failure to include assignment of certificate of title in any transfer of an automobile, similar fine and imprisonment up to ten years; making false statement concerning a known stolen car, operation of same or the receiving, or transferral of a stolen vehicle, fine of from $500 to $5000 and imprisonment of from sixty days to five years; alteration or forgery of a certificate, or knowingly using such, fine of $1000 to $5000 and imprisonment of from one to ten years; removal or defacing of a distinguishing or identifying mark from a vehicle, fine up to $1000 and imprisonment up to seven years, and failure to report any obliteration of such marks, fine of from $50 to $1000 and imprisonment up to seven years.

Injured in Auto Accident

An automobile accident occurred at "Sam Lams" hill, 1½ miles south of Middletown, Thursday evening, when a car from Felton collided with the rear end of a traction engine that was standing at the bridge taking water. The car was badly demolished and Miss Clazie, of Canada, who was a passenger was cut on the face and arm by broken glass. She was brought to the office of Dr. D. W. Lewis, where her wounds were dressed.

The driver claimed the accident was the result of his brakes failing to work when he applied them.

U. OF D. FARMERS' DAY

SEVERAL FINE ADDRESSES

The advisability of farmers engaging extensively in research work in connection with the necessity of doing more than mere actual field work if they are to obtain the maximum results, was strongly urged in an address Thursday afternoon at the annual Farmers' Day celebration, held at Newark under the direction of the Experiment Station of the University of Delaware.

The growing importance of research work was stressed by President A. F. Woods, of the University of Maryland, in his address:

"Farmers to-day must realize the necessity of doing work aside from their activities in the field," he said, and pointed to the work being done by research agriculturalists in an endeavor to find things which will enable farmers to get the largest returns from their investments. His remarks were replete with concrete illustrations of exemplifying the need he emphasized.

"Present modernized agriculture has resulted purely from work which has been done in private and public laboratories," he declared.

DR. CLINTON ADVISES RESEARCH

"Every farmer must believe, first, that he can do a thing, then he must have the will to do it," was the message of Dr. L. A. Clinton, Director of Agricultural Extension, of the University of New Jersey, the subject of whose address was "The Will To Do."

Following an inspection in the morning of Herford cattle, loaned by the Buck and Doe Run farm, an address was given by Professor H. R. Burr, of the agricultural department of Williamson School, in which he dealt with the benefits and advantages obtainable from cattle of this type.

RAIN AFFECTED ATTENDANCE

More than 800 men and a number of women took part in the day's event, mostly coming to the scene in automobiles. Equipped with picnic lunches, the gathering repaired to College Farm at noon for luncheon, coffee being served by the university.

Demonstrations including culling of poultry, inspection of orchards, fertility plots, variety orchards, experimental plots in soils and field crops and tractor tests.

IN MEMORIAM

Annie Price Roe, wife of Thomas C. Roe entered into rest Tuesday morning, July 26th, 1921, after an illness of about two weeks. She was the oldest daughter of William Price, now deceased, but formerly a well-known resident of this town.

Her early girlhood was spent at the family homestead, near Warwick, Md. She completed her education at Western Maryland College, and was one of the first to be graduated from that institution. She never ceased to feel an abiding interest in her Alma Mater. It was there that her studious deportment and winning manners won for her the friendship of teachers and students, a friendship that stood the test of time and endured throughout a long and busy life.

Mrs. Roe was a woman far above the average, of refined tastes and a cultured mind. Whether as daughter, sister, wife, mother, or friend, nobly did she fill every position in life. Quiet and retiring in manner, she was appreciated most by those who lived closest to her, by those who came within the inner circle of her friendship.

In her home she reigned supreme, and the many guests who partook of the hospitality which she so graciously yet so unostentatiously bestowed, will not soon forget the rare charm of her presence there,—they will not soon forget the loving greeting, the warm handclasp at meeting and the tender Godspeed at parting.

When sorrows and bereavements came into her life she never questioned the Divine goodness, but met them with the patience and fortitude of her gentle Christian nature. She felt that the same loving hand that sent the sunshine sent the shadows too, and that the One who afflicted her, was "too wise err, too good to be unkind." She bore her burdens with the resignation of one who looks beyond the things of time to those which are eternal.

At the last, there were no sad farewells, but she passed away, quietly and peacefully, as she had lived, and with a smile on her face she entered into the Great Beyond.

"Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar,
When I put out to sea.

But such a tide as moving seem asleep,
Too full for sound or foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
Turns again home.

Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark!
And may there be no sadness of farewell,
When I embark.

For though from out our bourne of Time and place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar."

Stole 70 Chickens

Thieves visited the farm home of Mr. Fred Baker, two miles west of town, and carried away 70 fine chickens, one set single carriage harness and two sets of wagon harness. The robbery occured while Mr. Baker and his family were absent from the farm, and he has no clue as to who committed the theft.

WHY MOTHER WAS UNHEEDED

Little Jean's Defense Exculpated Playmate, but One Fears What Happened to Herself.

Six-year-old Jean came from school accompanied by a new friend of her own age. After their special luncheon the two children went upstairs to the play-room, where they had a jolly time for an hour or two, till came the time for Jean to get ready for her weekly dancing lesson. Following an unwritten law, fully understood and amicably practiced among the mothers of that certain neighborhood, the little friend was told to run home and come some other day. Minutes passed but the young guest failed to pass with them, and the first request was repeated more emphatically. Again no action. Then the telephone was requisitioned and direct orders from the mother of the small offender were transmitted with quick results.

While Jean was being dressed for her dancing lesson mother seized the opportune moment to point a moral. Great surprise was expressed at the failure of the guest to go home when asked, the enormity of the offense pointed out, and Jean properly cautioned never herself to be guilty of such impoliteness. Jean's mind seemed wholly engaged in a struggle with a troublesome shoe lace, but finally the sense of the situation penetrated her curly head and her sense of fairness awoke.

"Oh, mother," she interposed defensively, "don't be so hard on Betty. She wanted to go home every time you called to her, but I told her not to pay any 'tention, 'cause you were only the maid."

Addition to Commandments.

Four-year-old Bessie had been to Sunday school, where the Ten Commandments were being studied. She had an older brother who was noted for being sick or crippled if there was work to be done. One day their mother asked the boy to fill the woodbox. Immediately he developed a sore foot and limped slowly toward the wood pile. Bessie looked at him reproachfully and said: "Thou shalt not hypocrite."—Chicago American.

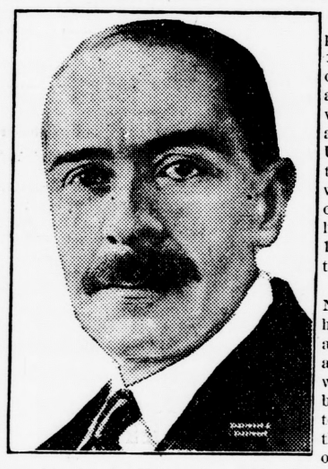
Farrand New Head of Cornell

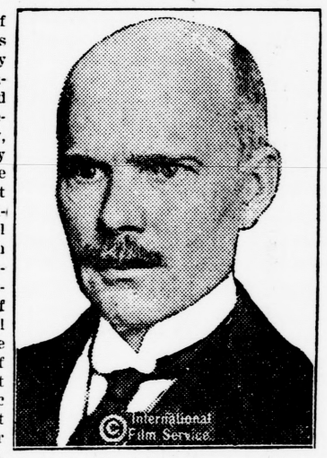


Dr. Livingston Farrand, elected president of Cornell university to succeed Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, recently appointed minister to China achieved national reputation by his war work. He obtained a leave of absence from the presidency of the University of Colorado in 1915 to enter war relief work overseas, and when he was chosen chairman of the central committee of the Red Cross, he resigned the presidency March 1, 1919, to devote his entire attention to that organization.

Dr. Farrand was born at Newark, N. J., June 14, 1867. He received his education at Princeton, Cambridge and Berlin and his medical degree at Columbia. From 1893 to 1901 he was instructor in psychology at Columbia university, professor from 1901 to 1903 and professor of anthropology there from 1903 to 1914. The degree of doctor of laws has been conferred upon him by the University of Michigan and the University of Colorado.

In 1917 and 1918 he was director of the tuberculosis work in France for the International Health board. From 1905 to 1914 he was executive secretary of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, and from 1912 to 1914 treasurer of the American Public Health association. He was editor of the American Public Health Journal from 1912 to 1914, and is the author of "The Basis of American History" (1904).

Heartbeats Over Wireless



Maj. Gen. George O. Squier, chief signal officer of the United States army, has made a notable discovery by which palpitation and other troubles of the heart may be diagnosed even though the patient be far removed from medical facilities—say, in middle of the Atlantic ocean—by application of "wired wireless." The principle involved is similar to that which made possible the multiplication of the volume of the inaugural address of President Harding, March 4, the human heart beats being amplified thousands of times. A demonstration to a group of physicians of the United States army at the signal corps laboratory, Washington, for the first time revealed working plans of the remarkable innovation. A heart transmitter designed for the specific purpose, resting by its own weight over the heart of the subject under examination, was placed in position. Passage of the blood through the various valves of the heart is responsible for vibrations in an air chamber which faithfully reproduce the manifold actions of the blood when coursing through the valves of the heart.

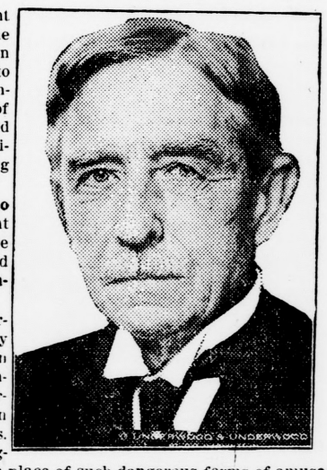
Counsel of Shipping Board

Elmer Schlesinger of Chicago (portrait herewith) has been appointed general counsel of the United States shipping board, by Chairman A. D. Lasker. A survey of the legal side of the shipping board's affairs which Mr. Schlesinger must supervise indicates that there are 500 law cases pending in district and state courts of the United States against the fleet corporation and the shipping board, involving claims totalling about $50,000,000. There are also 1,700 cases in the admiralty courts pending against the shipping board and the fleet corporation, involving sums in excess of $50,000,000.

Mr. Schlesinger is forty. He was born in Chicago. He was graduated from Harvard university in 1901, entered the Harvard law school the same year, and took his law degree in 1903.

The plan of reorganization of the shipping board provides that there will be five vice presidents of the Emergency Fleet corporation, three of whom will be in charge of operations, one the chief counsel, and one in charge of sale of ships and salvage of materials.

Crafts and the Prize Fight

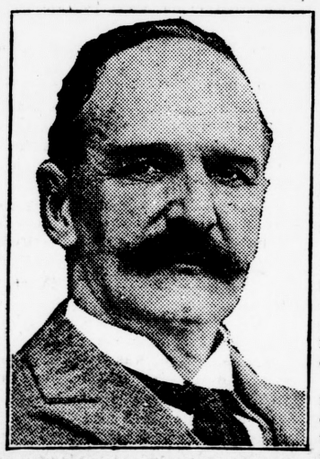


The Dempsey-Carpentier fight forced Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts of the international reform bureau more than ever into the public eye. Failing to stop the fight by legal process he announced that Governor Edwards of New Jersey and other officials would be prosecuted. He also outlined various reform activities. He said among other things:

"We will go through the state to make a campaign for the punishment of the offenders responsible for the fight and speak against the proposed use of the Jersey City arena for another fight on Labor day.

"We want the people to understand that we are not making merely a destructive campaign; we have been waging a fight by constructive methods for the past several months in order to substitute proper recreation for such amusements as prize fights. Community organization will be suggested to provide proper recreations in place of such dangerous forms of amusements as unrestricted moving pictures, public dances, and automobile rides."

DuPont Now Delaware Senator



Gen. T. Coleman DuPont has been appointed United States senator from Delaware by Governor Denney to succeed Josiah O. Wolcott, who resigned to become chancellor of Delaware. General DuPont was placed in nomination at the Republican national convention as a candidate for president. He received seven votes on the first ballot. He has been Republican national committeeman from Delaware for many years.

General DuPont was born in Louisville, Ky., Dec. 11, 1863. In early life he was an engineer for large coal companies. Later he engaged extensively in coal and iron mining and in the construction and management of street railways.

He probably is best known as former president of the E. I. DuPont de Nemours Powder company, one of the leading powder producers of the world, from which position he retired in 1915. He went to New York city and became heavily interested in the Equitable Life Assurance society.

EASY to cook with, easy to control, and easy to keep clean—that's the story of the Florence Oil Cook Stove.

Burns kerosene. No wicks, no valves. Cooks, bakes, roasts, and does it evenly and thoroughly. Powerful burners direct the intensely hot blue flame close up under the cooking. The heat is automatically controlled by turning the lever handles.

The Florence Portable Oven has a baker's arch that throws the heat to all parts of the oven. We are always pleased to show you why the use of the Florence Cook Stove and Oven means more heat and less care.

GERMANY ON THE JOB

ACCORDING to a statement attributed to John M. Glenn, Secretary of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, "Germany is the only European country that is working to any extent. Practically the rest of them are loafing. They want the United States to give them more money so they can go out and play some more."

This indicates that history may repeat itself by demonstrating that the conquered nation most quickly gets back to normal and eventually outstrips its conquerors in the pursuits of peace. In one sense, Germany was not conquered, notwithstanding it was forced to sign a treaty dictated by its enemies. German territory was never invaded, German property was not destroyed, the German people never felt the humiliation of enemy occupation of any considerable area. The force of circumstances compels the Germans to get back to work, while large numbers of people in the victorious nations give way to the desire to take a long rest.

In the "good old days" it was the custom of the victor to carry away a lot of prisoners to be made slaves, and a lot of property to be used for the benefit of the victors. In some cases, such as the overthrow of Carthage, the victory was followed by complete destruction. No such penalty was visited upon Germany. In fact, every opportunity is now extended to Germany to get back to work in order that she may pay her reparation debts, and, when thus back at work, Germany will be in a fair way to prove a dangerous commercial rival to her former enemies.

The fact that Germany is back at work is something that must be kept in mind in shaping our own commercial policies, particularly in the framing of tariff bills, the development of foreign trade and the maintenance of a merchant marine.

THE OTHER FELLOW'S GOODS

WE notice that the people who want Europe to pay her debts in goods are not producers of similar goods themselves. We do not hear any American woolgrowers asking that Europe pay her debt in Australian wool, or in woolen goods made in Europe. We do not hear any cotton manufacturers or the wage earners in cotton or woolen mills asking that European debts to America be paid in goods such as they produce. They are not anxious to lay off their jobs and forego their wages while the debts are being paid. Those who want the debts paid in goods have the other fellow's goods in mind.

P. O. SAVING

POSTMASTER GENERAL HAYS contemplates a cut of about $15,000,000 in the cost of running the Post Office Department. He gives assurance that in making the reduction no efficient employe will be discharged. Since the inauguration of the economy program, departmental and bureau chiefs are vying with each other to see who will turn in the best record at the end of the fiscal year. In spite of the fact that appropriations have already been made to cover the cost of running the Government until July 1, 1922, substantial savings from those totals are sure to be realized.

Resume Road Work

Plans are being made by the Sussex county Highway Improvement Commission to dispose of $300,000 worth of additional bonds in order to carry on the road building program which was started in Sussex county two years ago. When this allotment is sold, it will complete the bond issue of $1,000,000 authorized by the session of the Legislature of 1917. But unless some provision is made at the next session of the General Assembly for an additional bond issue and the furtherance of the plan of building the highways on a State aid basis, improved road work in lower Delaware will come to an end.

Plenty of Game

Sportsmen in lower Delaware report there will be plenty of game this fall. The forests at this time abound in game and indications are that the gunning season this year will be the best in several years.

An appeal is being made to farmers to have their dogs fastened at night in order to prevent them from roaming the woods and killing the young rabbits. A large number of rabbits are killed during the summer by dogs being allowed to run at large.

Every Time I Sit Down to a Juicy Steak Now I Give Thanks to Tanlac, He Declares.

"Every time I sit down to a juicy steak now I give thanks to Tanlac for taking me off that milk and mush diet I had to live on for a year," said Joseph R. Towns, the well-known and popular proprietor of the Sanitary Meat Market, of Marshall, Mich.

"I had stomach trouble of the worst sort and was going down hill so fast I thought I would have to give up my business. I was so nervous and worried I dreaded to see night come, as it meant little for me and then in the morning I was so fagged out I dreaded to go to my market.

"The money I spent for Tanlac was the best investment I ever made. I never dreamed a medicine could do the work it did for me. Three bottles was all I needed to make me as sound as a dollar. I never felt better or more like working in my life than I do right now. I eat anything I want, my stomach is in good shape and I am brimful of energy. I sleep all night without turning over and get up in the morning as happy as a boy.

"Not only has Tanlac made me feel fit and fine, but I have also gained twenty-five pounds in weight. If anybody wants to know more about what I think of Tanlac let them come to me and I will be glad to tell them. It certainly hasn't an equal."

Tokio Plans for Big Population.

In thirty years greater Tokio will include about 122,616 acres in area with an approximate total population of 7½ million persons, according to the Yorodzu.

The Tokio city assembly recently appointed a special commission to which the question of the limits of the city was referred. According to the draft plan submitted, a circle is to be drawn with Tokio central station in Marunouchi as the center, with a radius of ten miles, and all the towns and villages within the new greater city limits.—Japan Advertiser.

Playgrounds for Berkeley.

Berkeley, Cal., is now acquiring, through the board of education, the playgrounds needed in practically every school district of the city, as the result of the $2,300,000 bond issue voted in 1919. The city has acquired for $300,000 the high school recreation building and site in the center of the city as recommended by the city planning commission. The playground commission will operate all school playgrounds.

"What," Lakington asked curiously, "does he think you are?"

"A charming young girl," answered Irma demurely, "whose father lost his life in the war, and who at present ekes out a precarious existence in a government office. At least, that's what he told Lady Frumpley—she's the woman of unassailable virtue. She was profoundly sentimental and scents a romance, in addition to being a snob and scenting a future duke, to say nothing of a future duchess. By the mercy of Allah she's on a committee with his mother for distributing brown paper underclothes to destitute Belgians, and so Freddie wangled an invite for her. Voila tout."

"Splendid," said Lakington slowly. "Splendid. Young Laidley comes of age in about a week, doesn't he?"

"Monday, to be exact; and so I go down with my dear aunt on Saturday."

Lakington nodded his head as if satisfied, and then glanced at his watch.

"What about bed?" he remarked.

"Not yet," said Peterson, halting suddenly in his walk. "I must see the Yank before I go to Paris. We'll have him down here now. Give him an injection, Henry—and, by God, we'll make the fool sign. Then I can actually take it over to the meeting with me."

He strode to the door, followed by Lakington; and the girl in the chair stood up and stretched her arms above her head. For a moment or two Hugh watched her; then he, too, stood upright and eased his cramped limbs.

"Make the fool sign." The words echoed through his brain, and he stared thoughtfully at the grey light which showed the approach of dawn. What was the best thing to do? "Make" with Peterson generally implied torture, if other means failed, and Hugh had no intention of watching any man tortured. At the same time something of the nature of the diabolical plot conceived by Peterson was beginning to take a definite shape in his mind, though many of the most important links were still missing. And with this knowledge had come the realization that he was no longer a free agent. The thing had ceased to be a mere sporting gamble with himself and a few other chosen spirits matched against a gang of criminals; it had become—if his surmise was correct—a national affair. England herself—her very existence—was threatened by one of the vilest plots ever dreamed of in the brain of man. And then, with a sudden rage at his own impotence, he realized that even now he had nothing definite to go on. He must know more; somehow or other he must get to Paris; he must attend that meeting at the Ritz. Then a sound from the room below brought him back to his vantage point. The American was sitting in a chair, and Lakington, with a hypodermic syringe in his hand, was holding his arm.

He made the injection, and Hugh watched the millionaire. He was still undecided as to how to act, but for the moment, at any rate, there was nothing to be done. And he was very curious to hear what Peterson had to say to the wretched man, who, up to date, had figured so largely in every round.

After a while the American ceased staring vacantly in front of him, and passed his hand dazedly over his forehead. Then he half rose from his chair and stared at the two men sitting facing him. His eyes came round to the girl, and with a groan he sank back again, plucking feebly with his hands at his dressing gown.

"Better, Mr. Potts?" said Peterson, suavely.

"I—I—" stammered the other. "Where am I?"

"At The Elms, Godalming, if you wish to know."

"I thought—I thought——" He rose swaying. "What do you want with me? D—n you!"

"Tush, tush," murmured Peterson. "There is a lady present, Mr. Potts. And our wants are so simple. Just your signature to a little agreement, by which in return for certain services you promise to join us in our—er—labors in the near future."

"I remember," cried the millionaire. "Now I remember. You swine—you filthy swine, I refuse . . . absolutely."

"The trouble is, my friend, that you are altogether too big an employer of labor to be allowed to refuse, as I pointed out to you before. You must be in with us, otherwise you might wreck the scheme. Therefore I require your signature."

"And when you've got it," cried the American, "what good will it be to you. I shall repudiate it."

"Oh! no, Mr. Potts," said Peterson with a thoughtful smile; "I can assure you, you won't. The distressing malady from which you have recently been suffering will again have you in its grip. It renders you quite unfit for business."

For a while there was silence, and the millionaire stared round the room like a trapped animal.

"I refuse!" he cried at last. "It's an outrage against humanity. You can do what you like."

"Then we'll start with a little more thumbscrew," remarked Peterson, strolling over to the desk and opening a drawer. "An astonishingly effective implement, as you can see if you look at your thumb." He stood in front of the quivering man, balancing the instrument in his hands. "It was under its influence you gave us the first signature, which we so regrettably lost. I think we'll try it again. . . ."

The American gave a strangled cry of terror, and then the unexpected happened. There was a crash as a pane of glass splintered and fell to the floor close beside Lakington; and with an oath he sprang aside and looked up.

"Peep-bo," came a well-known voice from the skylight. "Clip him one over the jaw, Potts, my boy; but don't you sign."

CHAPTER VIII.

In Which He Goes to Paris for a Night.

ONE.

Drummond had acted on the spur of the moment. It would have been manifestly impossible for any man, certainly one of his caliber, to have watched the American being tortured without doing something to try to help him. At the same time the last thing he had wanted to do was to give away his presence on the roof. The information he had obtained that night was of such vital importance that it was absolutely essential for him to get away with it somehow; and, at the moment, his chances of so doing did not appear particularly bright. It looked as if it was only a question of time before they must get him.

He watched Lakington dart from the room, followed more slowly by Peterson, and then occurred one of those strokes of luck on which the incorrigible soldier always depended. The girl left the room as well.

She kissed her hand toward him, and then she smiled.

"You intrigue me, ugly one," she remarked, looking up, "intrigue me vastly. I am now going out to get a really good view of the Kill."

And the next moment Potts was alone. He was staring up at the skylight, apparently bewildered by the sudden turn of events, and then he heard the voice of the man above speaking clearly and insistently.

"Go out of the room. Turn to the right. Open the front door. You'll see a house, through some trees. Go to it. When you get there, stand on the lawn and call 'Phyllis.' Do you get me?"

The American nodded dazedly; then he made a great effort to pull himself together, as the voice continued:

"Go at once. It's your only chance. Tell her I'm on the roof here."

With a sigh of relief he saw the millionaire leave the room; then he straightened himself up, and proceeded to reconnoiter his own position. There was a bare chance that the American would get through, and if he did, everything might yet be well. If he didn't—Hugh shrugged his shoulders grimly and laughed.

It had become quite light, and after a moment's indecision Drummond took a running jump, and caught the ridge of the sloping roof on the side nearest the road. From where he was he could not see The Larches, and so he did not know what luck the American had had. But he realized that it was long odds against his getting through, and that his chief hope lay in himself. It occurred to him that far too few unbiased people knew where he was; it further occurred to him that it was a state of affairs which was likely to continue unless he remedied it himself. And so, just as Peterson came strolling around a corner of the house followed by several men and a long ladder, Hugh commenced to sing. He shouted, he roared at the top of his very powerful voice, and all the time he watched the men below with a wary eye.

It was just as two laborers came in to investigate the hideous din that Peterson's party discovered the ladder was too short by several yards.

Then with great rapidity the audience grew. A passing milkman; two commercial travelers, a gentleman of slightly inebriated aspect, whose trousers left much to the imagination; and finally more farm laborers. Never had such a tit-bit of gossip for the local alehouse been seen in the neighborhood; it would furnish a topic of conversation for weeks to come. And still Hugh sang and Peterson cursed; and still the audience grew. Then, at last, there came the police with notebook all complete, and the singer stopped singing to laugh.

The next moment the laugh froze on his lips. Standing by the skylight, with his revolver raised, was Lakington, and Hugh knew by the expression of his face that his finger was trembling on the trigger. Out of view of the crowd below he did not know of its existence, and, in a flash, Hugh realized his danger.

"Good morrow, Henry," he said quietly. "I wouldn't fire if I were you. We are observed, as they say in melodrama. If you don't believe me," his voice grew a little tense, "just wait while I talk to Peterson, who is at present deep in converse with the village constable and several farm laborers."

It is doubtful whether any action in Hugh Drummond's life ever cost him such an effort of will as the turning of his back on the man standing two yards below him, but he did it apparently without thought. He gave one last glance at the face convulsed with rage, and then with a smile he looked down at the crowd below.

"Peterson," he called out affably, "there's a pal of yours up here—dear old Henry. And he's very annoyed at my concert. Would you just speak to him, or would you like me to be more explicit? He is so annoyed that there might be an accident at any moment, and I see that the police have arrived. So—er——"

Even at that distance he could see Peterson's eyes of fury, and he chuckled softly to himself. But when the leader spoke, his voice was as suave as ever; the eternal cigar glowed evenly at its normal rate.

"Are you up on the roof, Lakington?" The words came clearly through the still summer air.

"Your turn, Henry," said Drummond. "Prompter's voice off—'yes, dear Peterson, I am here, even upon the roof, with a liver of hideous aspect.'"

With a mighty effort Lakington controlled himself, and his voice, when he answered, was calm.

"Yes, I'm here. What's the matter?"

"Nothing," cried Peterson, "but we've got quite a large and appreciative audience down here, attracted by our friend's charming concert, and I've just sent for a large ladder by which he can come down and join us. So there is nothing that you can do—nothing." He repeated the word with a faint emphasis, and Hugh smiled genially.

"I'm interested in quite a number of things, Captain Drummond," said Lakington slowly, "but they all count as nothing beside one—getting even with you. And when I do . . ." He dropped the revolver into his coat pocket, and stood motionless, staring at the soldier.

The next instant he opened a door in the skylight which Hugh had failed to discover during the night, and climbing down a ladder inside the room, disappeared from view.

"Hullo, old bean!" A cheerful shout from the ground made Hugh look down. There, ranged round Peterson, in an effective group, were Peter Darrell, Algy Longworth, and Jerry Seymour. "Bird's-nestin'?"

"Peter, old soul," cried Hugh joyfully, "I never thought the day would come when I should be pleased to see your face, but it has!"

"Ted and his pal, Hugh, have toddled off in your car," said Peter, "so that only leaves us four and Toby."

For a moment Hugh stared at him blankly, while he did some rapid mental arithmetic. He even neglected to descend at once by the ladder which had at last been placed in position. "Ted and us four and Toby" made six—and six was the strength of the party as it had arrived. Adding the pal made seven; so who the deuce was the pal?

The matter was settled just as he reached the ground. Lakington, wild-eyed and almost incoherent, rushed from the house, and, drawing Peterson on one side, spoke rapidly in a whisper.

"It's all right," muttered Algy rapidly. "They're half-way to London by now, and going like h— if I know Ted."

It was then that Hugh started to laugh. He laughed till the tears poured down his face, and Peterson's livid face of fury made him laugh still more.

"Oh you priceless pair!" he sobbed. "Right under your bally noses. Stole away! Yoicks!" There was another interlude for further hilarity. "Give it up, you two old dears, and take to knitting. Well, au revoir. Doubtless we shall meet again quite soon. And, above all, Carl, don't do anything in Paris which you would be ashamed of my knowing."

With a friendly wave he turned on his heel and strolled off, followed by the other three. The humor of the situation was irresistible; the absolute powerlessness of the whole assembled gang to lift a finger to stop them in front of the audience, which as yet showed no signs of departing, tickled him to death. In fact, the last thing Hugh saw, before a corner of the house hid them from sight, was the majesty of the law moistening his indelible pencil in the time-honored method, and advancing on Peterson with his notebook at the ready.

"One brief interlude, my dear old warriors," announced Hugh, "and then we must get gay. Where's Toby?"

"Having his breakfast with your girl," chuckled Algy. "We thought we'd better leave someone on guard, and she seemed to love him best."

"Repulsive hound!" cried Hugh. "Incidentally, boys, how did you manage to roll up this morning?"

"We all bedded down at your girl's place last night," said Peter, "and then this morning, who should come and sing carols outside but our one and only Potts. Then we heard your deafening din on the roof, and blew along."

TWO.

"Go away," said Toby, looking up as the door opened and Hugh strolled in. "Your presence is unnecessary and uncalled for, and we're not pleased. Are we, Miss Benton?"

"Can you bear him, Phyllis?" remarked Hugh, with a grin. "I mean lying about the house all day?"

"What's the notion, old son?" Toby Sinclair stood up, looking slightly puzzled.

"I want you to stop here, Toby," said Hugh, "and not let Miss Benton out of your sight. Also keep your eye skinned on The Elms, and let me know by 'phone to Half Moon street anything that happens. Do you get me?"

"I get you," answered the other.

With a resigned sigh he rose and walked to the door.

"I've got five minutes, little girl," whispered Hugh, taking her into his arms as the door closed. "Five minutes of heaven. . . By Jove! But you look great—simply great."

The girl smiled at him.

"Tell me what's happened, boy," she said eagerly.

"Quite a crowded night." With a reminiscent smile he lit a cigarette. And then quite briefly he told her of the events of the past twelve hours, being, as is the manner of a man, more interested in watching the sweet color which stained her cheeks from time to time, and noticing her quickened breathing when he told her of his fight with the gorilla, and his ascent of the murderous staircase.

When he had finished, and pitched the stump of his cigarette into the grate, falteringly she tried to dissuade him. With her hands on his coat, and her big eyes misty with her fears for him, she begged him to give it all up. And even as she spoke, she gloried in the fact that she knew it was quite useless. Which made her plead all the harder, as is the way of a woman with her man.

Then, quite suddenly, he bent and kissed her.

"I must go, little girl," he whispered. "I've got to be in Paris tonight. Take care of yourself."

The next moment he was gone.

THREE.

"Have you got him all right, Ted?" Hugh flung the question eagerly at Ted Jerningham, who was lounging in a chair at Half Moon street, with his feet on the mantelpiece.

"I've got him right enough," answered that worthy, "but he doesn't strike me as being Number One value. He's gone off the boil. Become quite gugga again."

"H—l!" said Hugh, "I thought we might get something out of him. I'll go and have a look at the bird."

He left the room, and went along the passage to inspect the American. Unfortunately Jerningham was only too right: The effects of last night's injection had worn off completely, and the wretched man was sitting motionless in a chair, staring dazedly in front of him.

Thoughtfully Hugh stood in front of the millionaire, trying in vain to catch some gleam of sense in the vacant eyes.

"What luck?" Jerningham looked up as he came back into the other room.

"Dam' all, as they say in the vernacular. Have you blighters finished the beer?"

"Probably," remarked Peter Darrall. "What's the program now?"

Hugh examined the head on his glass with a professional eye before replying.

"Two things," he murmured at length, "fairly leap to the eye. The first is to get Potts away to a place of safety; the second is to get over to Paris."

"Well, let's get gay over the first, as a kick-off," said Jerningham, rising. "There's a car outside the door; there is England at our disposal. We'll take him away; you pad the hoof to Victoria and catch the boat-train."

"It sounds too easy," remarked Hugh. "Have a look out of the window, Ted, and you'll see a man frightfully busy doing nothing not far from the door. You will also see a racing car just across the street. Put a wet compress on your head, and connect the two."

A gloomy silence settled on the assembly, to be broken by Jerry Seymour suddenly waking up with a start.

"I've got the 'stomach-ache,'" he announced proudly.

His listeners gazed at him unmoved.

"You shouldn't eat so fast," remarked Algy severely. "And you certainly oughtn't to drink that beer."

To avert the disaster he immediately consumed it himself, but Jerry was too engrossed with his brainstorm to notice.

"I've got the 'stomach-ache,'" he repeated, "and she ought to be ready by now. In fact I know she is. My last crash wasn't a bad one. What about it?"

"You mean . . . ?" said Hugh, staring at him.

"I mean," answered Jerry, "that I'll go off to the airdrome now, and get her ready. Bring Potts along in half an hour, and I'll take him to the governor's place in Norfolk. Then I'll take you over to Paris."

"Great!—simply great!" With a report like a gun Hugh hit the speaker on the back, inadvertently knocking him down. "Off you get, Jerry. By the way, how many will she hold?"

"Two beside me," spluttered the proud proprietor of the Stomach-ache. "And I wish you'd reserve your endearments for people of your own size, you great, fat, hulking monstrosity."

He reached the door with a moment to spare, and Hugh came back laughing.

"Verily—an upheaval in the grey matter," he cried, carefully refilling his glass. "Now, boys, what about Paris?"

"Is it necessary to go at all?" asked Peter.

"It wouldn't have been if the Yank had been sane," answered Drummond. "As it is, I guess I've got to. Now listen—all of you. Ted—off you go, and raise a complete waiter's outfit, dicky and all complete. Peter—you come with me to the airdrome, and afterward look up Mullings, at 13 Green street, Hoxton, and tell him to get in touch with at least fifty demobilized soldiers who are on for a scrap. Algy—you hold the fort here, and don't get drunk on my ale. Peter will join you, when he's finished with Mullings, and he's not to get drunk, either. Are you all on?"

Ten minutes later he was at the wheel of his car with Darrell and the millionaire behind. But Hugh seemed in no great hurry to start. A whimsical smile was on his face, as out of the corner of his eye he watched the man who had been busy doing nothing feverishly trying to crank his car, which, after the manner of the brutes, had seized that moment to jib.

"A warm day," he murmured. "Don't hurry; we'll wait for you." Then, while the man, utterly taken aback, stared at him speechlessly, he strolled back to his own car.

"Hugh—you're mad, quite mad," said Peter resignedly, as with a spluttering roar the other car started, but Hugh still smiled. On the way to the airdrome he stopped twice after a block in the traffic to make quite sure that the pursuer should have no chance of losing him, and, by the time they were clear of the traffic and spinning toward their destination, the gentleman in the car behind fully agreed with Darrell.

RHODES NEVER WOMAN HATER

But Celebrated "Empire Builder" Had Little Time to Devote to the Gentler Sex.

Cecil Rhodes had the reputation of being a woman hater, but he was by no means a misogynist, though he might have been regarded a misogamist. He was wedded, it was said, by his friends, to Africa. But his life would have been more complete and no less full of achievement if he had been married to the right woman—at least so says my wife and other women who knew him.

While I have said Rhodes was not a woman hater, he was averse to wasting his time on women of mediocre intellect. Rhodes excused himself for not marrying by saying that he had not the time to give a wife the attention she was entitled to receive.

In his magnificent house at Cape Town there was only one picture. It was a painting of a young woman, beautiful and modest of aspect, by Sir Joshua Reynolds, and hung in the dining room above the fireplace. He loved to look at it and frequently told how he had gained possession of it. As a boy he took a great fancy to this picture, which belonged to a relative, and his love for it increased as he grew to manhood. Eventually he bought it. He always wound up the story by saying: "Now I have my lady, and I am happy."—John Hays Hammond in Scribner's Magazine.

"Freshness" Generally Ignorance.

Sometimes freshness takes the form of familiarity with superiors. We may be created "free and equal." That is, we may be created with the hope that in time we may become free and equal. But ordinarily there is a world of difference between a freshman and a judge of the Supreme court. The fresh know it all. They are impatient of progress and freely tell us what they are going to do when they get started. The old judge isn't sure about many things. He must have time to secure and digest the evidence. When he speaks his opinion becomes a law to the nation. Yet how presumptuous in fledglings to begin argument with those who really know. Still that's the way of the fresh. It has to be endured until it can be cured.—Exchange.

Great Minds Linked With Geneva.

Geneva and its lake early became the mecca of leaders in science and literature. Voltaire, Mme. de Stael, Georges Sand, Dumas, Daudet and Byron, Gibbon, Dickens, Ruskin, Frances Havergal, Sismondi, De Saussure, Amiel—a veritable parade of illustrious poets, novelists, essayists, philosophers and scientists — have linked their names forever with that fair city and its environs.

Wonderful!

It was the terminal examination, and a budding philosopher concluded his essay on "Mother Earth" with this startling statement: "The earth revolves on its own axis three hundred and sixty-five times in twenty-four hours. The rapid motion through space causes its sides to perspire; this is called dew."

Sunday School Lesson

(©, 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR AUGUST 7

PAUL IN CYPRUS AND IN ANTIOCH OF PISIDIA.

LESSON TEXT—Acts 13:1-52.

GOLDEN TEXT—Ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.—Acts 1:8.

REFERENCE MATERIAL—Matt. 13: 31-33; 28:18-20; Mark 16:15; Luke 24:46, 47.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Adventures of Paul and Barnabas.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Saul Silences a Sorcerer.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Paul Begins His Missionary Travels.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Paul Becomes a Missionary.

This marks the beginning of foreign missions as the deliberately planned enterprise of the church.

I. The Gifts of the Church at Antioch (v. 1).

Young as Antioch, the new religious center, was, she had prophets and teachers. Such are essential to church life. Indeed, they are never absent from the true church. In Ephesians 4:8-12 Paul says that when Christ ascended He gave gifts unto men for the purpose of perfecting the saints unto the work of the ministry.

II. Barnabas and Saul Sent Forth (vv. 2, 3).

While the five ministers were praying and fasting, the Spirit of God commanded them to send forth Barnabas and Saul. The work of evangelizing the world was laid so heavily upon these men that they refrained from eating in order to seek the will of the Lord in prayer. This is the kind of fasting that meets God's approval. From the fact that they were directed to send forth those whom the Spirit called, we learn that the real call to Christ's service comes from the Spirit. The Spirit calls and the church seconds the motion by sending those who are called. They sent the very best men from the church at Antioch. There was a second season of fasting and prayer, accompanied by the imposition of hands before they went forth, showing that ordination has its place in the sending forth of missionaries.

III. Preaching the Word of God in Cyprus (vv. 4, 5).

We are not told as to why they first went to Cyprus, but we infer that it was because it was the home of Barnabas. It is most natural that those who have heard good news should go with it first to their kindred and friends. As they went forth they preached the Word of God; not civic righteousness, current history, philosophy, etc. The great need today is Spirit-called and Spirit-filled men preaching God's Word. In fact, Spirit-filled men will preach nothing else.

IV. Withstood by Elymas the Sorcerer (vv. 6-12).

When Barnabas and Saul by invitation were telling Sergius Paulus of the Word of God, Elymas maliciously sought to turn his mind from the faith. This is the first obstacle they encountered. This opposer is the same one who came to Adam in Eden and to Jesus in the wilderness. He is the enemy of God and man. He now seeks to bar the gospel as it enters upon its career of the conversion of the heathen. Saul denounced him in the most scathing terms, calling him the child of the devil, full of guile and villainy, and pronounced him the enemy of all righteousness, accusing him of perverting the right ways of the Lord. Surely a man is never more of a villain than in trying to turn a soul from the gospel. Happily, the deputy heeded Saul's teaching and believed the gospel. It was in this connection that Saul's name was changed to Paul.

V. In the Synagogue at Antioch in Pisidia (vv. 15, 16).

From Paphos Paul and Barnabas went northward to Perga. From Perga they went into Antioch in Pisidia, where they entered the synagogue on the Sabbath day. Though he was sent to the Gentiles he does not depart from the order of beginning with the Jews. After the usual reading of the Scriptures, upon the invitation of the rulers, Paul delivered the discourse recorded in verses 17-41. This sermon is worthy of careful study. It consists of four parts: (1) Historical (vv. 17-23); apologetical (vv. 24-37); (3) doctrinal, (vv. 38, 39); (4) practical (vv. 40, 41). It sets forth the missionary message for all times and lands. Its essence should ever be the same. In this sermon he presented the glorified and risen Christ as the Savior from sin, basing his proof upon the testimony of living witnesses and the inspired Word.

VI. The Effect of the Sermon (vv. 42-52).

Many of the Jews and proselytes requested them to speak to them again. Almost the whole city came to hear the Word of God the next Sabbath. This great crowd incited the jealousy of the Jews. This jealousy could not long be restrained; it broke out in open opposition. This opposition was in turn answered by Paul's rejection of them and turning to the Gentiles.

The Inner Circles of Love.

How blessed all the inner circles of love are; they rise up and find their center in Christ, and shed down upon us rays of His own divine love and gladness. If we dwelt more in it we should ascend more quickly to Him, and He would descend upon us with the full blessedness of His own loving Presence.—Anonymous.

The Ideals of Ministry.

Seeing we have this ministry, as we have received mercy, we faint not; but have renounced the hidden things of dishonesty, not walking in craftiness, nor handing the word of God deceitfully; but by manifestation of the truth, commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God.—II Corinthians 4; 1, 2.

DAIRY FACTS

SUCCULENT FEED FOR DAIRY

Modern Machinery for Planting and Cultivating Roots Makes Work Less Laborious.

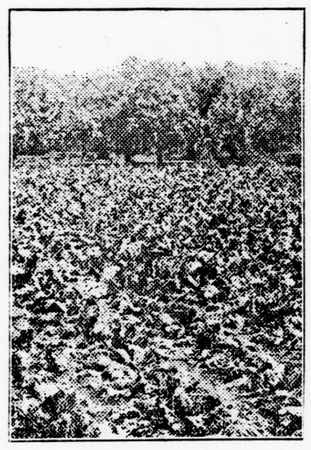
(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

With the development of the silo many dairy cow owners have overlooked the value of roots as a succulent feed for cattle. Mangel-wurzel, beets, carrots, and turnips are the principal roots grown for this purpose. They are particularly adapted to the cooler and more moist portions of the country. The principal drawback to their use is the labor of growing, harvesting and storing them. On the other hand, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture, root crops have a distinct advantage for small dairies, as it is generally accepted that a silo will not prove economical where less than six animals are being fed. Roots may be stored in a proper cellar, or buried in the ground, and can be taken out in any desired quantity without injury to the remainder.

A surprising amount of roots can be produced on a small acreage. A yield of 25 tons per acre of mangel-wurzels is nothing unusual, while in England, where roots are used almost entirely to supply succulent food, the yield per acre is increased still further by intensive farming.

Other kinds of beets, and also turnips and carrots, may be used. Turnips, however, should be fed after milking rather than before, as they give a bad flavor to the product. Yellow carrots impart a desirable color to the milk. For feeding purposes the mangels will probably be found the most practical beet. Among carrots, the Long Orange is recommended because of its large size and heavy yield. It forms a long, thick root, and is very easily grown. The White Vosges or Belgian is grown exclusively for stock, and is an even heavier yielder. The rutabaga is recommended as a good turnip. The same soils and methods of cultivating are adapted to all three kinds of roots.

The soil should be well enriched, and should be one that warms up quickly in the spring. Most growers regard sandy loam as best adapted to the culture of root crops, this being particularly true of the early spring crop.



An Acre or Two of Roots Will Feed a Small Dairy Herd.

For later crops heavy soils can be employed, and muck soils are widely used for the midsummer and fall crops. Land that is in good physical condition as the result of early and proper handling, well supplied with available plant food and rich in organic matter, is essential to best results. Applications of stable manure at the rate of 20 to 30 tons per acre are advisable, and this may profitably be supplemented by the use of commercial fertilizer containing at least 2 per cent nitrogen, 8 per cent phosphoric acid, and 4 per cent potash.

The seed is sown in rows at least 30 inches apart if horse cultivation is practiced, but under hand cultivation they need not be more than 15 to 18 inches. Ordinarily about 6 pounds of beet seed per acre is required. Seed is ordinarily covered to a depth of ¾ to 1 inch. As beet seed is rather slow in germination, the practice of sowing some quick-sprouting seed along with it is sometimes followed. These plants serve as markers for the rows before the beets are up, so that cultivation may be begun before the beets show above the ground. Radishes are frequently used for this purpose.

Beet seeds come in clusters, and it is inevitable that thinning by hand will be required.

Roots intended for winter storage are allowed to stand in the field until just before heavy autumn frosts occur, when they are pulled and stored in pits or cellars, requiring much the same treatment as potatoes and similar root crops.

From 20 to 35 pounds of sliced or pulped roots, with a proper grain ration and dry foliage, is a day's ration for an ordinary dairy cow. Thus it will be seen that 2½ tons will carry a cow through the usual five-months' winter feeding period. An acre or two of beets, carrots and turnips should be enough to supply any herd which is not large enough to make a silo profitable. With the development of the sugar-beet industry many implements and methods of culture have been devised which reduce the labor required to grow root crops.

Separate Milk at Once.

After milking, separate the milk before it becomes cold. Milk at blood heat runs through the separator best and should be fed while still warm.

Gives True Worth of Cow.

Weighing the milk gives the real worth of the cow—if you also test her milk for butterfat.

Worthy of Leather Medal.

The owner of a scrub bull should wear a leather medal made from the bull's hide.

IMPROVED ROADS

ROAD CONSTRUCTION IN 1920

Cost Was About Twice as Much as in 1917 on Account of Distinct Shortage of Labor.

(Prepared by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.)

Every kind of road cost about twice as much to build in 1920 as it did in 1917, according to the chief of the bureau of public roads, United States Department of Agriculture, and highway construction suffered more than any other class of work through railroad congestion, strikes, labor troubles and material shortages.

After the war there was a great public demand for improved roads. Many roads had been seriously damaged by war traffic, and it appeared that the return of men from military service would provide an abundance of labor. The army of laborers which was expected to apply for the work did not, however, materialize. On the contrary, there was a distinct shortage of labor, and wages reached the highest levels attained in the history of the country. In 1917, competent labor could be secured for from $1.50 to $3 per day, but the corresponding wages in 1920 were from $3 to $5 for a shorter day's work.

Well Kept Roadside Where Weeds Are Controlled by Frequent Mowing.

In proportion to this demand there was also a pronounced scarcity of construction materials. Sand, gravel, stone, and cement, and materials commonly used in road work increased in price between 1917 and 1920 from 50 to 100 per cent. Naturally, these increases in cost were reflected in the prices paid to contractors for road work. Gravel roads increased from $4,535 to $7,250 per mile; concrete from $21,165 to upward of $40,000 per mile, and brick roads from $33,000 to $55,000 per mile.

As funds available for road construction are largely limited by statute, or by the returns from taxation, a majority of the states this year have deliberately withheld work, the plans for which had been completed, until they could obtain a greater return for their expenditure.

SCOTS USED FIRST MACADAM

Resident of Ayrshire Made His First Experiments About 1814—Roads Now Common.

Macadam roads are so common in America that national pride may well lead us to look upon them as a domestic product.

But John MacAdam was a Scot, resident in Ayrshire, where he made his first experiments about 1814, according to the New York Sun. Five years later the first public roads were laid with the pavement and a grateful parliament awarded the inventor a grant of $50,000.

In 1827, after the new pavement had been thoroughly tested, MacAdam was made surveyor general of all metropolitan roads in and about London and the use of his method became general throughout the United Kingdom.

HARDING LAUDS GOOD ROADS

President in First Message to Congress Deplores Money Wasted in Improved Highways.

In no uncertain terms, President Harding expressed his opinion of the automobile, motor transport and good roads in his first message to congress. He said: "The motorcar has become an indispensable instrument in our political, social and industrial life. . . . I know of nothing more shocking than the millions of public funds wasted in improved highways—wasted because there is no policy of maintenance. Highways must be patrolled and constantly repaired."

Hens Vary in Weight.

Egg-producing hens vary in weight, the average being about four pounds. The principal breeds of egg producers are the Leghorns, the Wyandottes, the Plymouth Rocks, the Rhode Island Reds and the Minorcas.

Work Is World Wide.

Road construction and maintenance have become world wide as well as provincial problems and foreign governments are doing much work toward highway development.

In recognition of the achievement of the heroes of the World war, a new coast-to-coast paved highway, known as the "Victory Highway," has been launched in Topeka, Kan.

Being Nice to Uncle.

Uncle had been invited to dine and was especially impressed by the consideration shown him by the little niece.

"Frances," he said to her, "you are a very nice little girl to ask me to have more soup. Now, why do you want me to have it?"

Frances was distressingly frank in explanation. "So," she returned, "you won't eat so much of the turkey as you did last time."—Exchange.

HAVE NEED OF MUCH FOOD

Voracious Appetites of Growing Boys Are Natural and Not to Be Wondered At.

Dr. E. F. Du Bois made extensive studies a few years ago on the food requirements of growing boys, and found that they needed about 25 per cent more than grown men, weight for weight. Now Drs. F. G. Benedict and Mary F. Hendry have made similar studies on girls between twelve and seventeen years of age. These correspond in their results with those made by Dr. Du Bois.

The Journal of the American Medical association comments that considered in connection with the usually lively muscular activities of children, which call for liberal expenditure of energy, the facts ascertained explain and justify the large appetites of growing boys.

Plan Big Experiment.

The New South Wales Textile Workers' union, writes Trade Commissioner A. W. Ferrin, has proposed to convert the old Parramatta jail buildings into woolen mills and to establish a company to be known as the Co-operative Woolen Mills with a capital of £200,000 ($972,000). It is intended to manufacture the whole of the woolen goods required by the government, to be ultimately converted into clothing for the police force and other government employees.

At Last!

She was very extravagant in her tastes, especially where hats were concerned, and when they had been married for five years Pat realized that it was no joke supporting a wife.

One morning she appeared at breakfast, and was more than usually amiable and Pat suspected another raid on his bank balance. He was not disappointed.

"Oh, Patrick, dear," she said. "Oi dreamed last night that you bought me such a lovely five-guinea hat!"

"Did you, my darlint?" returned Pat. I'm pleased indeed, for sure it's the first dream of a hat you've had what ain't cost me a cent!"—London Ideas.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription.

Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.

Abundant Occupation.

"Speakin' of unemployment," said Farmer Cornstossel "I have my doubts about whether there is near as much of it has been represented."

"I spose," commented his wife, with a shade of sarcasm, "you know more about it than the people who get up the statistics."

"Statistics are all what I'm restin' my opinion on. Nearly every family in the country now has an automobile, and anybody that ever tried to keep a flivver in runnin' order knows as well as you an' me that idle moments is mighty scarce."

Mad All Over.

"What good does it do you to shake your fist at that disappearing motorist and call him hard names? He can't see or hear you."

"Maybe not," said the wrathy pedestrian, "but I hoped there might be a relative of his among the spectators who would take up the quarrel. I'm mad enough to punch anybody who's kin to him, if he's only a second cousin."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

His Complaint.

Jud Tunkins says he doesn't see why he can't get a capitalist and a few press agents to back him as the champion checker player.
